Two area veterans participated in an Honor Flight to Washington this week as the nation approaches the Memorial Day holiday when we remember the sacrifices of the men and women of the armed services.

Retired Capt. Charles Kindoll of Hanover and retired First Sgt. Ray Spenneberg of Carrollton served more than 20 years together in the U.S. Army and served in Vietnam from 1968 to 1969.

"The trip in general was outstanding," said Kindoll. "They treated us like royalty."

"What made it so great was being there with all those guys," Spenneberg said.

They flew Tuesday, May 21, to Washington, to visit the many war memorials there, including the Vietnam Veteran's Memorial, which lists every service member who died during the Vietnam War. The trip was conducted by the Honor Flight Network, non-profit organizations dedicated to taking as many United States military veterans as possible to see the memorials of the respective wars in which they fought at no cost to the veterans.

Kindoll said that he and Spenneberg were two of about 85 veterans touring the city on police-escorted buses. Plus each veteran had a guardian with them. Kindoll traveled this Honor Flight with his grandson, Zachary Westerfield, as his guardian. Spenneberg traveled with Steve Schad, who is principal of Roger Bacon High School in the Cincinnati area and a Marine veteran as well.

"The group of volunteers up here...those people do the most fantastic job of herding all of us around," said Spenneberg.

Kindoll commented on how well the disabled veterans were cared for throughout the tour.

"The memorials were outstanding and the organizers were outstanding," said Kindoll. "They were on top of everything."

Most of the veterans were from the Vietnam Era, but Korean War veterans and one World War II veteran were also part of the

Monday, May 27, is Memorial Day

The American Legion wants to remind everyone that flag etiquette on Memorial Day suggests lowering the flag to half-staff at sunrise. It should remain at half staff until noon when it will again be raised to full staff.

The Honor Guard Unit of Major Samuel Woodfill Post # 9 in Madison will conduct a memorial service at the Trimble County Courthouse in Bedford at 11 a.m. on Memorial Day.

A second ceremony by the Honor Guard Unit will be at 1 p.m. at the Indiana Veteran's Cemetery on North Gate Road on the Madison State Hospital Grounds.

Domestic abuse, molesting a child charges

Courier staff report

A case that began May 15 with a call to investigators about a 5-year-old victim of sexual assault resulted in a May 17 arrest on charges of child molestation and domestic battery.

The sequence of events involved two female children, ages 5 and 12, and their mother by the time charges were filed against Ruben Perez, 36, of Madison. Child molesting is a Level 1 felony and domestic battery is a Level 6 felony.

Ruben Perez

On May 15, Detective Yancy Denning of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department and Emily Goins, a case worker with the Department of Child Services, went to King's Daughters' Hospital after after receiving a phone call on behalf of what was reported to be a 5-year-old female victim of sexual assault.

The victim's mother told officers her daughter woke up with pain in her mouth and vaginal area. She also said the child "did not know what happened during the night," said the affidavit. The mother said her daughter "may have been drugged and sexually assaulted."

Denning and Goins scheduled a forensic interview for the child to take place the next day. The mother agreed to take the child for the interview the morning of May 16 but did not get the child to the appointment until later in the day. Goins told Denning she learned the mother and 5-year-old were late to the appointment because the mother's 12-year-old daughter had told the mother she thought she was pregnant. The mother took the 12-year-

Civil suit against county in postal worker's 2018 death

Courier staff report

Mark Kappeler, who lost his wife in an accident on Little Brushy Fork Road in February 2018, filed a civil tort suit against the Jefferson County Commissioners last week.

Teelah Kappeler, 31 of Hanover, had a part-time job as a Rural Carrier Associate with the United States Postal Service in Madison when she died in the accident.

One of her routes took her through the far eastern part of Jefferson County, near the border with Switzerland County. Her route was on East Little Brushy Fork Road, a road she had driven only a few times before Saturday, Feb. 17, 2018, when she drove the route for the last time.

In February 2018, the Madison Courier reported:

"The Postal Service system allows carriers to check in to indicate where they are throughout the day. When Teelah did not check in that evening a week ago, the Postal Service reported to the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department that Teelah was missing.

"Sheriff's Deputy Josh Cochran gathered information indicating Teelah's last delivery was at 3:12 p.m. in Switzerland County. Jefferson County Sheriff's deputies, Switzerland County Sheriff's deputies, Postal Service employees, friends, family and neighbors began to search for Teelah.

"When we got the news, my dad and I, we were all out there looking for her," said her sister, Tonya Shanks, who said at the time that she wanted everyone to know that it was not just law enforcement and postal workers hunting for Teelah.

At 10:04 p.m., Jefferson County Central Dispatch received a call from Gregory Tielking, the Madison postmaster who was among those searching. He said Teelah's vehicle had been found. A Sheriff's Department report indicates the vehicle went off the south side of the road before flipping over a steep concrete culvert and landing in the creek.

Jefferson County Coroner Rodney Nay said the official cause of Teelah's death was accidental drowning.

Teelah and her husband, Mark, had two daughters, Ariana, then 9, and Liara, then 1.

Mark Kappeler filed the May 14, 2019 complaint against the county, citing the county's responsibility as owner of the road where his wife's accident took place to maintain the roadway and post proper signs warning of potential hazards.

The complaint states: "On February 17, 2018, approximately 7,444 feet of County Road 850 East, the county road was defective and in need of the following repair: a) the road crossing the culvert bridge was strewn with potholes, b) the guardrail installed on the southern side of the culvert bridge had become detached from the bridge and fallen into the creek, c) there were no warning signs of the danger, d) the shoulder approach to the culvert bridge was improperly maintained and hazardous."

The complaint also cites other road conditions like potholes, and lack of

‘Lunch shaming’ prompts Greenwood district to suspend

Indiana

GREENWOOD — Greenwood Community Schools has suspended its policy of serving cold sandwiches to students whose families owe lunch money after a kindergartner’s relatives said the girl was shamed for not having enough money for lunch. Superintendent Kent DeKoninck said the district south of Indianapolis plans to review its meal-charging policy and processes “to see how we can do things better.” That move comes amid a growing national backlash against “lunch shaming.” The Indianapolis Star reported that cafeteria workers took away a 6-year-old girl’s tray of hot food last week and replaced it with a peanut butter and jelly sandwich because she lacked enough money for lunch. The girl’s grandfather, Dwight Howard, told WISH-TV that she “was more than sad” because the incident caused her embarrassment.

Ex-sheriff’s lieutenant charged with beating

INDIANAPOLIS — Marion County Prosecutor Terry Curry has announced criminal charges against a former sheriff’s lieutenant accused of beating a man who had been in a relationship with the mother of the officer’s children. Curry said Thursday that John Dorsey has been charged with official misconduct and two counts of battery stemming from an arrest in Indianapolis in which the officer allegedly struck the man between the legs while searching him and struck him again while transporting him to the Marion County Jail. Dorsey was arrested Friday, the same day he was fired from the Marion County Sheriff’s Office. He worked in the department’s sex offender registry unit and had been with the department for 11 years. A message seeking comment was left for Dorsey’s attorney.

Prayer vigil after fatal house explosion

JEFFERSONVILLE — Dozens of people gathered for a prayer vigil after a weekend explosion of a house that killed one person. Michael O’Brien, who was among those Wednesday at Jeffersonville’s First Christian Church, said it “could have happened to any of us” and “we just felt a need to be here to recognize that and be thankful for what we have every day.” William Phillips, 51, was killed when a home exploded Sunday in Jeffersonville. His wife, Janet Phillips, was critically injured. Investigators say natural gas that built up in the house was to blame. Neighbors were among those at the vigil. A woman in a neighboring home was also injured by the explosion that damaged 20 other homes. An 11-year-old girl suffered a broken collarbone.

Search for boy swept away in swollen creek

DELPHI — A recovery effort is underway for a 4-year-old who was swept away in a creek. WLFI-TV in Lafayette reported Lieutenant Dan Dulin of the Department of Natural Resources said a witness on a bridge over Deer Creek saw the boy being carried downstream and notified authorities. Officials said it is unclear how the boy got in the creek, which flows through Delphi. Investigators say searchers were aided by a helicopter, which scanned the creek for about two hours before the search became a recovery effort. Natural resources officials said Thursday’s heavy rain caused the creek to swell, resulting in a strong current. Authorities haven’t identified the boy or his family.

Ex-Gary schools chief seeks jury trial

CROWN POINT — The former superintendent of Gary Community Schools is seeking a jury trial on charges that she double-billed the cash-strapped district for expenses at a conference in California. Cheryl Pruitt’s attorney said during a Wednesday hearing in Lake Superior Court that his client wants to proceed to trial. Pruitt, 56, was charged last October with theft and official misconduct for allegedly double-billing about $1,250 in luxury expenses at a 2016 Los Angeles conference. The Post-Tribune reported Indiana Attorney General Curtis Hill is suing Pruitt for $18,000, mostly for penalties and fees. Pruitt was hired as Gary’s schools chief in 2012. She resigned last year after an emergency manager took over the district as it faced more than $100 million in debt. She’s now CEO at Chicago Virtual Charter School.

Ex-officer pleads guilty for punching suspect

FORT WAYNE — A former police officer has pleaded guilty to battery and resigned after authorities say he punched a man who refused to have his blood drawn for a drunken driving investigation. State police say Charles Smith, 28, of Fort Wayne entered the plea this week to the misdemeanor in Allen Superior Court. The Associated Press left a message Friday with a lawyer listed in court records as representing Smith. Police say the Fort Wayne officer was at Allen County Jail with the suspect in March when the man refused a breath test. Smith obtained a search warrant to draw the man’s blood, but the man reportedly refused to comply. Police say Smith tried to put the man in handcuffs, but he pulled away and Smith punched him three times.

Storms leave about 60,000 without power

SOUTH BEND — Utilities serving northern Indiana say about 60,000 customers lost power as storms with winds approaching 70 miles an hour buffeted the region. Northern Indiana Public Service Co. said about 35,000 customers lost service during the storms early Thursday, and fewer than 20,000 remained without power that afternoon. Indiana and Michigan Power Co. said about 13,000 Indiana customers lost power, and Kosciusko REMC said more than 9,500 of its members lost power. Other REMCs reported more than 2,000 members lost service. The National Weather Service said a trained spotter measured a 68-mph gust in Allen County.

Public meeting set on tattooing over scars

FRANKFORT — The Kentucky Department of Health has proposed banning artists from tattooing on scarred skin and is holding a public meeting on the proposal next week. News outlets reported the proposed regulation is part of a routine review of current state health rules for tattoo businesses and the public hearing is set for May 28 in Frankfort. The state agency declined to explain the motivation behind the ban, which doesn’t define what constitutes a scar. Beth Fisher is a spokeswoman for the Kentucky Cabinet for Health and Family Services, which oversees the department of public health. She said related regulations haven’t been updated for 15 years. Public comments on the proposal are being accepted through the end of the month.

State grants will use old tires to repave

FRANKFORT — Kentucky’s Division of Waste Management is giving grants to five counties to use recycled rubber tires to repave roadways. The $502,000 in grant funding will be used for rubber-modified asphalt projects that use crumb rubber manufactured from waste tires. The grants were announced by the Kentucky Energy and Environment Cabinet, which oversees the waste management division. Cabinet Secretary Charles Snavely said the grant program is valuable because it promotes the use of recycled rubber from discarded tires. The counties of Clark, Fayette, Hardin, Hopkins, and Pulaski received the grants. The state’s Waste Tire Trust Fund collects a $2 fee from the sale of each new tire in the state. The funding helps manage millions of scrap tires discarded each year and develops markets for recycled tire products.

Judge rejects ex-officer plea in minor abuse

LOUISVILLE — A federal judge has rejected a plea deal for a former police officer who admitted to sexually abusing minors in the Louisville police department’s now defunct youth program. News outlets report U.S. District Court Judge David Hale said Thursday that the proposed 15-year sentence for ex-Louisville police Officer Kenneth Betts was too lenient. The deal called for Betts to serve 10 to 15 years on federal charges of enticement and child pornography. Hale said federal guidelines call for a 27-year sentence. Hale told Betts he could proceed with his guilty plea and be sentenced, though he may receive a “less favorable” sentence. He said Betts could also withdraw his guilty plea. Betts attorney, Brian Butler, declined to comment. Another hearing date was set for Aug. 14.

Kentucky training vets for aerospace, aviation

LOUISVILLE — A new program is training veterans with aviation or power plant mechanics experience to become certified by the Federal Aviation Administration. The new Veterans Accelerated Learning for Licensed Occupations initiative offers certifications for veterans and transitioning military members looking for jobs. Stewart Ditto, director of the Kentucky Aerospace Industry Consortium, said Kentucky’s aerospace and aviation industry is facing critical workforce shortages. A news release from Kentucky’s Education and Workforce Development Cabinet said the program is a collaborative effort. It includes the Kentucky Science and Technology Corporation, the state’s technical college system, the University of Louisville and the Kentucky Commission on Military Affairs. It condenses an 18-month certification program to one semester. Somerset Community and Technical College and Jefferson Community and Technical College are offering the accelerated program to eligible military veterans.

Crash following lane closure kills 2, injures 3 on I-265

Courier staff report

A man and a woman from Scottsburg died and three others were injured Wednesday morning in a five-car accident on I-265 due to a traffic backup caused by a sinkhole.

Indiana State Police officials Wednesday morning had warned drivers traveling eastbound on I-265 near the 5-mile marker just after 6 a.m. that they needed to find an alternate route as a large sinkhole had developed, closing both eastbound lanes while road crews worked to make repairs.

New Albany Police officers arrived a the scene of the crash after a 2011 International DuraStar work truck failed to stop near the 3.4 mile-marker on I-265 and collided with a pickup truck, causing a chain reaction of crashes involving three more vehicles.

The traffic was slowing and coming to a stop because of the diversion created by the lane closure after the sinkhole's discovery and morning rush hour traffic. A preliminary investigation found the work truck, driven by Brady E. McAfee, 22, of Depauw, first collided with a 2008 Chevrolet pickup truck, which in turn struck a maroon 2000 Ford F-150 pickup truck. That vehicle then collided with a white 2012 Ford pickup truck hauling an equipment trailer loaded with a mini-excavator, which then struck a 2017 Ford Fiesta.

The driver of the maroon 2000 Ford F-150, Douglas E. Borders, 42, and the passenger, Christina M. Coy, 36, both of Scottsburg, were both dead at the scene, the Floyd County Coroner's Office said.

The driver and passenger of the Red Chevrolet Pickup truck, Robert Schultz, 39, and Myra Schultz, 40, both of Elizabeth, were taken to the University of Louisville Hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The driver of the gray Ford Fiesta, Maria Bernabe, 28, of New Albany, was taken to Baptist Floyd in New Albany, also with non-life-threatening injuries.

The driver of the white 2012 Ford pickup truck, Nevin Saltsgaver, and his passenger, Jacob Saltsgaver, both of Leavenworth, Indiana, were uninjured in the crash.

McAfee also was uninjured.

A news release from the Sellerburg ISP Post said I-265 remained closed at the scene of the crash until about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday. New Albany Police units were the first to arrive on-scene and requested the assistance of the Indiana State Police including crash reconstructionist, who assumed the investigation. New Albany Police officers, the New Albany Fire Department and the Floyd County Coroner's Office assisted at the scene. The investigation is on-going.

Foster father acquitted in death of son, 4

ELIZABETHTOWN — A jury has acquitted a man who was accused of killing his 4-year-old foster son. News outlets report the Elizabethtown jury returned the verdict Wednesday for Billy Embry-Martin, 34, after deliberating for about five hours. Hunter Payton died two years ago from head injuries. He was removed from his parents' home by the state just two months earlier over alleged drug abuse and neglect. Embry-Martin has maintained his innocence and testified that the boy fell and struck his head. A state medical examiner ruled the injuries were inflicted and not accidental. An investigation by Radcliff police and Child Protective Services led to Embry-Martin being charged with murder last year. Embry-Martin's attorney said the verdict was a relief. The boy's paternal grandmother said she was disappointed with the jury's decision.

Man fatally shot after hitting trooper with SUV

HAZARD — Kentucky State Police say a man who hit a state trooper with his sport-utility vehicle has died after troopers fired at the vehicle. Police said in a news release that troopers were trying to find Christopher L. Brown of Letcher County in connection with a stolen vehicle and previous charges. He was located around 6:20 p.m. Tuesday, but police said he fled in the SUV and refused to stop when troopers turned on their lights and sirens. Officers followed him south from Hazard to the Vicco community of Perry County, where police say Brown drove onto a strip mine road. The news release said he struck a trooper, who was treated at a hospital and released. Brown died at the scene. No one else was injured. The state police Critical Incident Response Team is investigating.

Fruit of the Loom cutting 100 jobs

BOWLING GREEN — Fruit of the Loom said it is cutting about 100 jobs, mostly at its headquarters in Kentucky. News outlets report the Bowling Green-based company said it is transferring information technology services to Wipro Ltd., an India-based company that specializes in IT, consulting and business process services. The company said in a news release Wednesday that the transition starts immediately and continues through March. The move will result in the loss of about 100 positions, most of which are in Bowling Green. Fruit of the Loom manufactures underwear, clothing and sports equipment under various brands. Berkshire Hathaway Corp. purchased the ailing company in 2002 for $835 million. The company has about 28,000 employees worldwide, including about 1,000 in Bowling Green. It closed its Jamestown plant in 2014, eliminating about 600 jobs.

COMMENTARY

Uptick in immigration to Indiana signals better opportunity

By MICHAEL HICKS

The research center where I work just released a study on immigration in Indiana. Sociologist Emily Wornell was the lead author of a work that most Hoosiers will find interesting. Part of the study reported surprising data, but there was also some analysis that should clarify many misunderstandings about the issue. Let me explain.

So far this century, a full quarter of all the population growth across Indiana has come from immigrants. This is important in a state that is now growing at well beneath the national average. More critically, across the 32 Indiana counties losing population last year, a full 29 saw net immigration from immigrants. None saw growth in native-born citizens.

Despite what many would think as a flood of immigrants, Indiana is only at about one-third of its peak immigration of the late 19th century. From what this study can tell, immigration may be the single biggest source of population growth for Indiana in the coming decades. Again, that is not a new development. Roughly 150 years ago, when my most recent immigrant ancestor, Michael Joseph Young, arrived from Wales, nearly one of every 11 Hoosiers was foreign born.

MICHAEL HICKS

It is fair to say that the big decline in immigration to Indiana accompanied our state's long, slow relative economic decline. The absence of immigration did not cause it, but immigrants seek opportunity. Declining opportunity in the late 20th century caused immigrants to move elsewhere. The uptick in immigration to Indiana in this century signals better opportunity. We must hope to sustain it.

New immigrants in Indiana should be especially welcomed. On average, they are better educated than the typical Hoosier adult, and unlike the state as a whole, educational attainment among immigrants is growing briskly. Immigrants to Indiana are, on average, a major benefit to the state, and contribute more in tax dollars than they receive in benefits. There is little doubt about that conclusion, despite political rhetoric to the contrary.

However, the benefits and costs of immigration are not equally distributed. The costs are very isolated, while the benefits are spread more uniformly across households. Like other researchers, we found that immigrants affect labor markets. On average, immigrants boost wages by buying more goods and services. However, for workers with a high school degree or less, immigration reduces starting wages by roughly 2 percent. While that amounts to as much as $70 a month, which is not a trivial amount, the effect is limited to starting wages. The effect of immigrant competition is erased after three months on the job.

For workers with college experience or degrees, the effect is wholly positive. Working in places with a greater share of immigrants boosts wages. That should not be surprising, since proximity to better-educated workers broadly boosts wages. Moreover, the services produced by better-educated workers appears to be in higher demand across immigrant households.

We also examined the potential negative consequences of immigrants on student learning. This is the one place where the costs for the state would be most impacted. Fortunately, the state keeps close tabs on the number of English Language Learners, or students for whom American English is a second language. Over the past four years for which we have uninterrupted data, there is no effect of different shares of ELL students on school performance.

Perhaps the most interesting finding detailed in the study is the more rapid pace of immigrant assimilation that accompanies current waves of immigrants. A century ago, language and cultural institutions were slower to adjust than today. This part of the study was also interesting in pointing out that immigrant assimilation is partially a two-way street. But, that should be obvious in a state where burritos and curry are becoming as common as potato salad, bratwurst and pierogi.

It is unfortunate that such a straightforward issue should be so politicized, but I suppose that is a residual of our times. I hope readers will come to www.bsu.edu/cber to read this analysis. It will erase any misgivings you may have about immigration in Indiana.

Study finds immigrants having a positive impact on Indiana

From Ball State University

"Fiscal, Economic, & Social Effects of Immigration in the Hoosier State," found that 25 percent of the population growth in Indiana between 2000-2015 was due to increasing immigration, said Emily Wornell, a research assistant professor with the Indiana Communities Institute at Ball State.

Worrell co-authored the study with Michael Hicks, director of the University's Center for Business and Economic Research.

Cities and small towns throughout the South and Midwest are experiencing booms in immigration. Communities, counties and states that have experienced large increases in immigrant population since the 1990s are called "new immigrant destinations," and Indiana is one such state, Wornell said.

"Immigration in Indiana is fiscally, educationally and demographically important, and likely marks an environment of increasing economic opportunity," she said. "Overall, we find that immigration, regardless of authorization status, is an important source of fiscal, economic, and demographic health for Indiana's future."

Wornell notes that Indiana's recent rising rate of immigration followed a period of long, steady decline. The study found that immigrant population growth is helping to stabilize the trend of declining populations in 19 Indiana counties, which may be particularly important in rural Indiana.

"Immigrants may represent the best chance for population growth in these communities in the foreseeable future. These newcomers will bolster the local job markets, fill up classrooms, and become contributing members to our communities."

In recent years, the majority of immigrants have come from Mexico (31.6 percent), followed by India (9.1 percent), and China (7.9 percent). The Philippines and Myanmar round out the top five, with 3.3 percent and 2.9 percent respectively.

The study details the current realities and implications of immigration in Indiana as a whole, including effects on demographics, education, wealth and poverty, employment, and the labor market.

Findings include:

Educational attainment — Not only are immigrants in Indiana better-educated than the state's incumbent population, their rates of educational attainment are increasing while rates remain relatively static for native-born Hoosiers

The study found while immigrants are concentrated at the lower end of the educational spectrum in Indiana as well as nationally, they are also concentrated at highest end. In 2016, slightly less than 11 percent of the native population and 30 percent of the foreign-born population (ages 25+) had less than a high school diploma. In the same year, approximately 24 percent of the native-born population had a college degree of more, while 30 percent of the foreign-born population had earned a college degree or higher. In fact, more than half of foreign-born degrees (15.8 percent) were graduate degrees. In contrast, only 8.5 percent of the native Hoosier-born population had earned a graduate degree by 2016.

Labor market — Workers with some college or a college degree or higher experienced no negative effect from immigration.

The study found that during 2002-2016 — a period of rapid growth in immigration — there was no impact on that wages of incumbent workers (those who have been working at the same firm for more than 90 days), and only a modest impact on the wages of new hires. Specifically, workers with a high school diploma or less saw modest declines in wages—$48 and $69 per month for less than high school and high school graduates respectively—due to increased competition.

The study also found that better-educated workers (some college/bachelor's degree or higher) experience labor demand wage increases from immigration resulting in $278 and $414 more per month, respectively.

Public Services – The study found that immigrants are net contributors to the nation and state's social welfare and public assistance programs.

According to the study, not only do immigrants, including unauthorized workers, pay into the public service system through income, payroll, sales, and property taxes, they tend use fewer services than the native-born population, and receive less benefit when they do use services.

Researchers also noted that immigration (measured as the number and prevalence of English Language Learners) does not appear to effect educational quality or outcomes.

"Based on our analysis, it is clear that immigration into Indiana, including unauthorized immigrants, is a net benefit to the state and should be welcomed in every county and municipality," said Hicks, the George and Frances Ball Distinguished Professor of Economics and Business Research. "At the same time, we acknowledge that there may be costs to some locations and populations. However, these costs appear to be transient, affecting only starting wages for workers with a high school diploma or less. We find no long term negative impact on wages.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Switzerland County's Colton Schirmer sustained a spinal fracture — one of the most severe a player can sustain — on a first quarter kickoff during a game in October, 2017. He participates in rehab with rehab dog Roscoe at Riley Hospital for Children in Indianapolis. (Submitted photos)

Thank you to everyone for Colton support

To the editor:

On behalf of our entire family we would like to thank everyone for their unbelievable support. We have been overwhelmed by the help of our family, concerned community members, school personnel, and many old and now new friends.

We would like to thank everyone for their cards, words of encouragement and prayers offered on behalf of Colton and our family over the past year and a half.

Although our world has changed immensely, when the going gets tough, the true "spirit" of our community and the best that humanity has to offer continues to shine through to help us fight through the adversity we face along this long road to recovery.

Words cannot adequately describe how very, very, much your selfless acts of kindness have affected our entire family.

Please continue to support future benefits for those in our community who are struggling, hug your children every day, and always let those you love and care about know how very important they are to you.

Love Always,
Beth, Colton, Whitley, and Emma Schirmer (McKittrick)

Thank you for the job-shadowing

To the editor:

We recently celebrated our 10th year of Job Shadowing at Switzerland County Middle School and I would like to take the time to personally thank everyone who has supported our students over those years. This valuable experiential learning opportunity would not be possible without the continued support of the Vevay Switzerland County Foundation, Inc. Their grant has helped almost 1,000 SCMS students get the opportunity to experience the profession of their choosing, while gaining an understanding of the educational path they will need to take in order to realize their occupational dreams. Students have had a multitude of unique experiences over the years, while spending a half day with their respective community professionals. These 8th graders have parked jets at Madison's Municipal Airport, crafted guitars and created songs with local musicians, peaked behind the curtain at our Sheriff's Department, interviewed healthcare professionals and participated in a mock disaster at King's Daughters' Hospital, sat in on surgeries at local veterinarian clinics, operated heavy equipment and learned about engineering while visiting local factories and plants, just to name a few. There have been so many community professionals from Jefferson, Switzerland, Ohio, and Ripley Counties that have volunteered their time, it would be impossible for me to list them all. Please know that your contributions are seen in the eyes of the students, as they board the bus at the conclusion of their visit, and chatter all the way home about what they experienced. You have made a lasting, positive impact on the students who will one day be the leaders of our communities and for that, I can't thank you enough.

'An Evening of Cordial Politics'

To the editor:

Are you as frustrated as I am that we can't talk about politics without being afraid of offending someone? Does the divisiveness of political discourse bother you? If so, I invite you to meet at the auditorium of the Madison public library on Tuesday, May 28, 2019, at 6:30 p.m. for "An Evening of Cordial Politics." There will be a few rules: 1. bring a joke to start things off, the cornier the better; 2. be prepared to answer some questions like what am I afraid of and why, what are my hopes and how do we to get from here to there; and 3. be polite — no sarcasm, no name-calling, no anger. We'll just be a bunch of friends getting together to discuss what's important. No guarantees that this will work, but isn't it worth a try?

Switzerland County woman pleads guilty in child's death; gets 25 years

Courier staff report

A Vevay, Indiana, woman was given a lengthy prison sentence May 20, 2019, as a result of pleading guilty to the crime of neglect of a dependent, causing death after the death of her 2-year-old son and subsequent investigation by detectives from the Indiana State Police-Versailles Post.

The investigation began June 18, 2017, when Indiana State Police detectives were asked to investigate the death of Colton B. Johnson, 2, who passed away at Cincinnati Children's Hospital. The investigation by Detective Grant Martin determined that Colton Johnson, who had a medical condition called "short bowel syndrome" was taken to Cincinnati Children's Hospital by his mother Robyn Johnson, 40, on June 16, 2017, because of complications resulting from his medical condition.

After being examined by the medical staff at Cincinnati Children's Hospital, Robyn Johnson declined any further medical attention and checked Colton out of the hospital, contrary to the advice of the medical staff. Doctors at Cincinnati Children's Hospital had determined Colton had extreme dehydration and a possible blood infection that required hospitalization and further treatment and testing.

Robyn Johnson signed an "Against Medical Advice" form and returned to her home in Vevay with Colton. Two additional doctors contacted her and urged her to return Colton to the hospital.

In the early morning hours of June 17, 2017, Colton was rushed back to Cincinnati Children's Hospital after going into cardiac arrest. Colton was unable to be revived and he passed away.

After an investigation that lasted more than a year, Robyn Johnson was charged with Neglect of a Dependent, Causing Death. Johnson ultimately pleaded guilty in the Switzerland County Circuit Court and was given the 25-year sentence. Johnson was also assessed fines and court costs.

School bus stop arm violation leads to arrest

From Indiana State Police

On April 23rd this year, school bus drivers across the state documented 2,530 stop arm violations during that one day.

On May 21, Trooper Michael Allen of the Indiana State Police post in Jasper was passing through the Charlestown area when he observed a stationary school bus facing westbound and loading children. The bus had its stop arm deployed and was using all required caution lights.

As the children were loading, an eastbound vehicle failed to stop and was stopped by Allen. Trooper James Ferguson of the Sellerburg ISP post was called to assist.

While conducting the traffic stop and investigation, the driver, Michael E. Hughes, 28, Charlestown, was found in possession of marijuana and paraphernalia. Ferguson arrested Hughes at the scene and took him to the Clark County Jail.

He was charged with reckless driving, a Class B misdemeanor; OWI (endangerment), a Class A misdemeanor; possession of marijuana, a Class B misdemeanor; and possession of paraphernalia, a Class C misdemeanor.

Jefferson County man arrested in death of Jennings Co. man

Courier staff report

Jennings County Sheriff's Office deputies arrested Richard D. White, 55, of Jefferson County on Tuesday after a lengthy joint investigation by the Jennings County Sheriff's Office and Indiana State Police into a fatal hit-and-run crash that claimed the life of a North Vernon man in September, 2018.

The crash occurred about 4:30 a.m. Sept. 16, 2018, when Davon Lee Shine, 24, was struck by a vehicle on U.S. 50 near County Road 700 West in Jennings County.

Shine died a result of injuries sustained in the crash. The vehicle that struck Shine left the scene before police arrived. Jennings County detectives led the investigation while Indiana State Police Crash Reconstructionists assisted with the crash investigation.

Evidence at the scene led police to believe that Shine was struck by a Toyota truck or SUV. After police released that information, a tip was given to law enforcement that a possible suspect vehicle, belonging to White was located at his residence in Jefferson County. Police found the vehicle at the residence and were able to obtain a search warrant for the vehicle. After the vehicle was seized, evidence linking White and the vehicle to the crash was obtained.

The investigation ultimately led to an arrest warrant issued in the Jennings County Circuit Court for White on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident resulting in death, a Level 5 Felony.

White was arrested Tuesday on the warrant and taken to the Jennings County Jail where he then posted bond.

A new era as Hulman family's business footprint closes

By MARK BENNETT
Terre Haute Tribune-Star

Change came to town last week. It seemed seismic, at the moment.

Imagine Terre Haute without a business directly operated by the Hulmans. That reality has been a long time coming. Last week, it got real.

Hulman & Co. sold its iconic brand Clabber Girl to a large, New Jersey-based corporation, B&G Foods. Little will visibly change at Clabber Girl Corp. Aside from a desire to expand operations at the local plant — where 180 employees manufacture Clabber Girl's familiar baking powder, baking soda, corn starch and other baking products — "it's going to be business as usual," said Gary Morris, who's been Clabber Girl's president for the entire 21st century.

The status quo also applies to the popular Clabber Girl bakeshop, restaurant and museum, which is filled with historic mementos from the Hulman family, dating back to their 1850 arrival in Terre Haute from Germany.

"This is all staying here," Morris said Wednesday morning, when he and Hulman & Co. CEO Mark Miles announced Clabber Girl's sale.

B&G paid $80 million for the brand, according to a U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission filing. B&G adds a profitable name to its portfolio of 50 food brands, which range from Green Giant to Cream of Wheat. The food maker expects Clabber Girl to generate $70 million to $75 million in annual net sales, according to the SEC filing.

In return, Clabber Girl gets an owner zeroed-in on the food business, and Hulman & Co. can focus on its core interest — auto racing, through the Indy 500, IndyCar series and IMS Productions.

Yet, in terms of Terre Haute's economic history, it appears the city has rounded a long, gradual turn and entered a straightaway to a new future. Hulman's sale of Clabber Girl Corp. and its baking powder — a product the Hulmans have manufactured downtown since 1899 — ends the family's direct business footprint in the city.

Its reach once stretched into all corners of the community. I started my professional journalism career 42 years ago, when the family owned the morning Terre Haute Star and afternoon Tribune.

That's all changed since then. Everything changes. Cities and people who handle change best expect it and adapt to it. Clabber Girl itself has done just that, even with a core product — its baking powder — still being used as it was decades ago. Morris came to Terre Haute in 1999 and became its CEO in 2000. Since then, Clabber Girl has grown from 50 workers to 180 employees; renovated the corner-hugging main building; added the bakeshop, restaurant and museum; and expanded its product line.

Gary Morris, president and chief operating officer of Clabber Girl, wants the baking powder manufacturer to expand operations at the Terre Haute facility under new owner B& G Foods. (Tribune-Star by Mark Bennett)

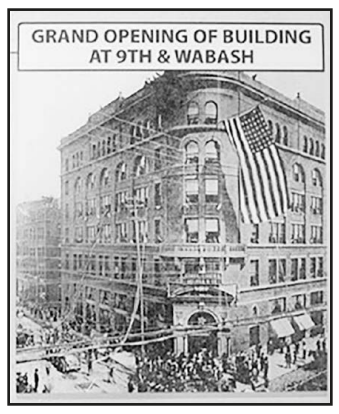
Clabber Girl honored its 19th- and 20th-century roots, while giving residents 21st-century jobs and a historic downtown destination.

Humans tend to lament change and wistfully long for their own good old days. Many Hauteans, though, would be confused and likely downright uncomfortable to live in the city's past, specifically 1893, when the Hulmans cut the ribbon on their company's new buildings in the 900 block of Wabash Avenue.

For starters, they'd wonder why the family built such a spectacular main facility, crafted in Romanesque Revival style architecture.

Then, they'd question the Hulmans' choice of a main speaker for the grand opening — Eugene V. Debs. That same year, 1893, he organized the nation's first industrial labor organization, the American Railway Union. A year later, Debs would lead railroad workers in strikes that froze the Great Northern Railway and shut down the Pullman Company. He was jailed. In less than a decade, Debs would make the first of his five runs for the presidency on the Socialist Party ticket.

And, Debs also was a beloved, devoted friend of Hulman & Co. co-founder Herman Hulman, a symbol of American capitalism. Debs' father and Herman often shared hunting stories with each other.



The start of a Terre Haute icon: This photo that is displayed in the Hulman & Co. Museum shows the grand opening of the building. (Tribune-Star by Joseph C. Garza)

And, more than 5,000 residents flocked to spaces between Wabash Avenue and Cherry Street to hear Debs and toast the company's new structure.

Such friendship between a labor activist and a business mogul sounds impossible in 2019. It happened in 1893, though. Debs congratulated "our eminent citizen, Mr. Herman Hulman, upon the gratifying success that has crowned his life work as a merchant in Terre Haute. He stands today on the very summit of success."

Yes, Debs said that.

Debs also weaved a poignant reminder about change, and its inevitability, as he spoke to the crowd about Herman Hulman's growing business. Debs gave his oration as a 37-year-old on the brink of international notoriety, with the 62-year-old Hulman and their fellow Terre Hauteans listening. A Tribune-Star retrospective in 1999 detailed Debs' words.

"I know the years are speeding on and that his gray hairs tell, in mournful numbers, that the last milestone in the journey is not far away," Debs said of Hulman. "And though riches (have) come to him as a reward of business sagacity, thrift, perseverance and indomitable will, they have not obscured his name, which is better than riches and will glow in the memories of men when the great business building — the completion of which we commemorate tonight — has been leveled by the gnawing tooth of time."

Indeed, Hulman's name remains central in Terre Haute's history. His building still stands, but the "gnawing tooth of time" has brought changes — albeit subtle ones — to the operation it housed for more than a century. The Hulmans' business interests now center on Indy. Clabber Girl is busy moving forward to a new era.

That leaves the community with both feet fully into its next chapter. Terre Haute and its residents must decide the pace of its steps forward.

warning signs or markers near the bridge "to advise drivers of the drop off and abrupt change of the roadway."

County officials declined to comment this week because the matter is pending litigation.

Mark Kappeler is asking for "an amount as will fairly compensate said Estate (of Teelah Kappeler) for losses incurred, for costs in this action, for attorney fees, a trial by jury, and for all other just and proper relief in the premises."

Mark Kappeler said after Teelah's accident that he wanted the county to find a way to make her route and roads like it safer for people to drive. He and Teelah's sister, Tonya, described the road in 2018 as narrow, curvy and without any guardrails that could save people from going over the edge of the road.

Mark Kappeler also then said he does not blame the county for what happened to his wife, but he would like the county to be held responsible for the preservation and safety of that road and roads like it.

"I really feel like the county needs to take responsibility," he said at the time. "Looking at the pictures of what that bridge looked like, the road was barely wide enough for one car and there is no safety precautions or anything. I don't want to blame somebody, yet this could have been so easily prevented."

old to a different doctor before taking the 5-year-old to the appointment.

About 10:45 p.m. May 17, Deputy Ben Flint and Reserve Deputy Travis Conover responded to a call about domestic battery at the address where the mother and two daughters lived. It is the same address where Perez resided.

The woman told officers Perez "beats her all the time" and that they had a fight that had turned physical, the probable cause affidavit said.

Officers observed bruising and marks on her neck and legs that appeared to be from prior altercations.

The victim also told officers she thought Perez "had been possibly having sex with her oldest daughter," which led her to confront him earlier that day.

The victim told officers that Perez reacted in an "angry and violent" manner and that he had been drinking, "which added to his violent temper."

The woman also told Flint that she had been afraid to take action against Perez because he paid most of the bills for her and her children and she didn't know how she could support them without his help, the affidavit said.

After Perez had been arrested and taken away, the woman, who had been going through Perez's phone, called the sheriff's office to tell Denning she had found a video of Perez having sex with her 12-year-old daughter.

Officers with the sheriff's department went back to the victim's home to collect the phone as evidence.

After obtaining a search warrant, officers searched through the phone and found the video the mother reported. The affidavit said the video does show Perez and the 12-year-old minor "engaged in intercourse."

Perez's bond was set Monday at $500,000 cash only in the Jefferson County Circuit Court.

group. Each branch of the military was represented.

Kindoll and Spenneberg said all of the memorials around D.C. were great. They agreed that their favorite was the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

"Charlie and I had good memories of all of it, except when we got to the wall. We both had friends who were there on the wall."

"We were both close to the first sergeant, who got killed... we could hardly talk about it," said Kindoll. "We were both on R&R when he got killed and we both felt we should've been there...it was 50 years ago, but it feels like yesterday. It was trying."

Kindoll said he was glad to be able to go with his friend, Spenneberg, and to visit the memorials and to talk with the other veterans about their time in military service.

"I'm also grateful my grandson was able to go with me," said Kindoll, who explained veterans were able to chose a guardian to go on the trip with them, and that the guardian had to be younger than 65.

Spenneberg didn't know his guardian before the trip, but, according to Kindoll, the pair "got off really well."

"I can't really express in words how much it meant to all of us," said Spenneberg of the trip.

"Everyone who has a chance to go ought to go," said Kindoll. "I enjoyed the trip, it was good to be able to go. It felt good to be appreciated."

The group returned to the Cincinnati airport late Tuesday evening to a crowd of hundreds of people, waiting to welcome them home.

Veterans older than 65 can apply to go on the all-expenses-paid trip to visit the Mall and all its memorials in Washington. Honor flight operations serving veterans from the Courierarea are Honor Flight Tri-State and Honor Flight Bluegrass. Each operation has an application and more information about the trip on the website at www.honorflight.org

Nearly 600 birds, dogs being transported to shelters

ASPCA, Gaming Commission crack down on fighting rings

MORGAN COUNTY — Nearly 600 animals were removed from two properties in Morgan and Owen counties this week by the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (ASPCA) after an Indiana Gaming Commission investigation.

The properties are believed to be connected with animal fighting rings, a news release from the ASPCA said.

"Animal fighting is one of the most heinous forms of animal cruelty, and sadly it is far more common in the United States than many people realize," said Jessica Rushin, senior manager of Partnerships for ASPCA Field Investigations and Response. "To betray animals by forcing them to fight for their lives for so-called entertainment is despicable. We're proud to work alongside the Indiana Gaming Commission to remove these dogs and birds from pain and suffering and hold those involved responsible."

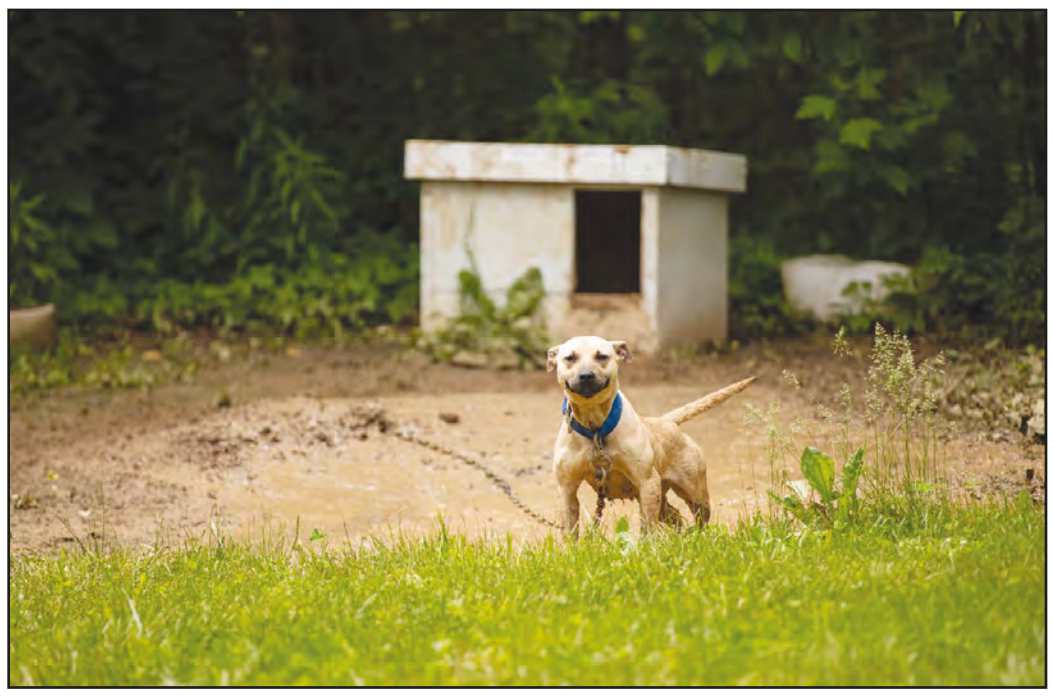
The ASPCA also is assisting local authorities with evidence collection, medical assessments, and veterinary forensic exams, the news release said.

Search warrants were executed Thursday morning by the Indiana Gaming Commission, and officials found the animals living on two properties.

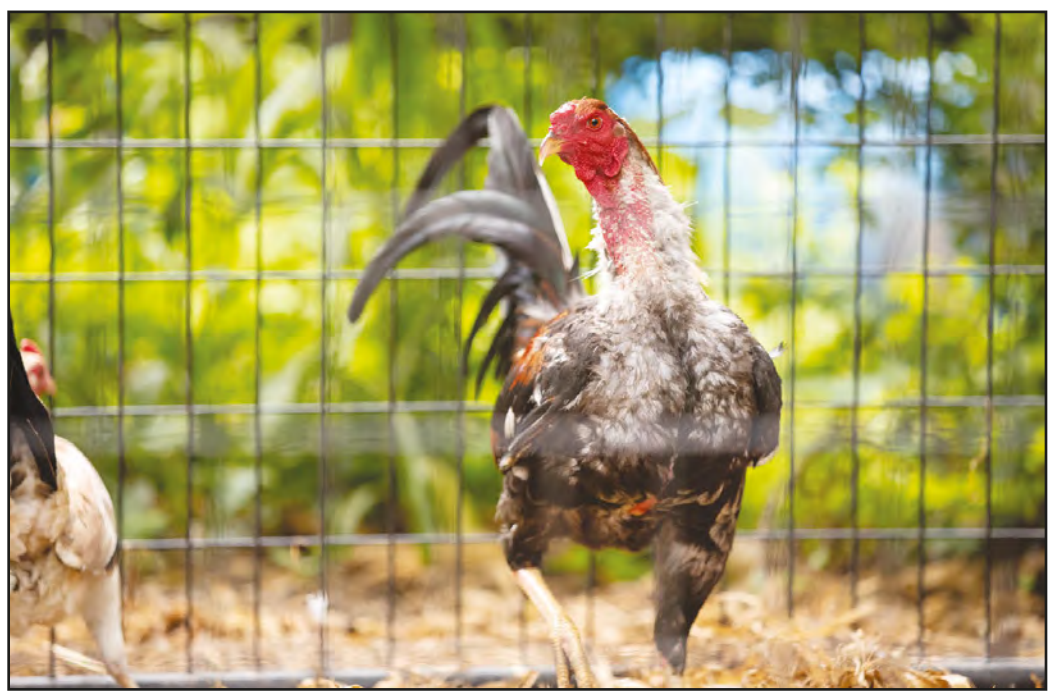
The dogs were found tied to heavy chains and housed in a manner consistent with dogfighting, while roosters were found with physical alterations commonly associated with cockfighting.

Animal-fighting paraphernalia were also discovered on the properties, the news release said.

"There's no place in Indiana communities for animal fighting and the illegal gambling that goes with it, and we are very pleased that we were able to shut down this operation," said Rob Townsend, superintendent of the Indiana Gaming Commission. "This investigation started with a tip from a concerned citizen to Crime Stoppers, and by raising more awareness about this type of activity we see an increase in reports from the public that better allow us to tackle animal cruelty in our communities."



Nearly 600 animals were removed from two properties in Morgan and Owen counties this week. (Photos provided from the ASPCA)



All animals will be taken to temporary shelters at undisclosed locations, where they will be cared for by ASPCA veterinary and behavior experts.

The ASPCA deploys nationally to assist local authorities in animal cruelty cases, as well as disasters such as hurricanes, wildfires, and tornadoes. It also provides local communities with resources including grants, training, and expertise to effectively assist animals during cruelty and disaster situations. In 2018, the ASPCA assisted nearly 22,000 animals impacted by cruelty and disaster situations. For more information on the ASPCA's efforts to end animal fighting, go to aspca.org/fightcruelty

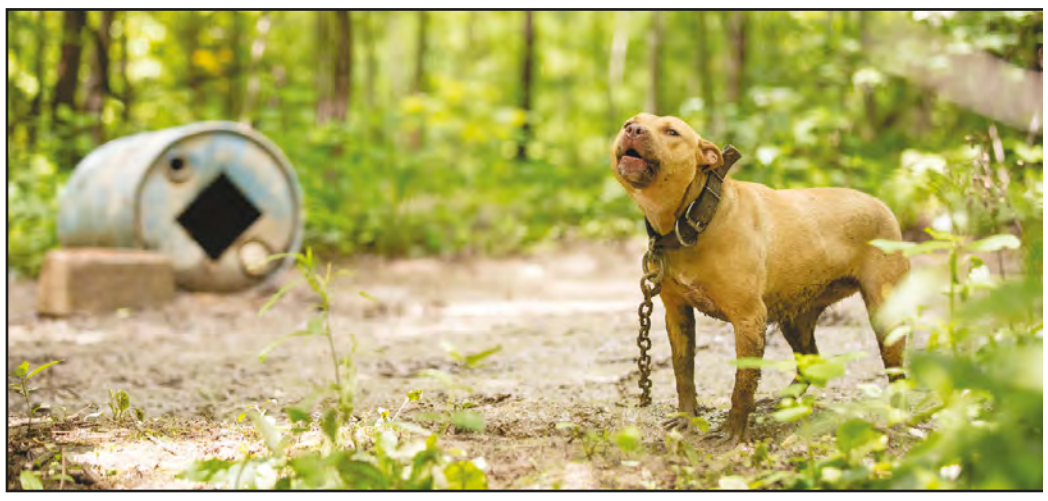
The animals will be taken to temporary shelters at undisclosed locations, where they will be cared for by ASPCA veterinary and behavior experts until custody is determined by the court.

The ASPCA's legal advocacy department will work closely with law enforcement and prosecutors to ensure the best outcome for these animals.

The Animal Care Centers of NYC; Animal Care Services- City of Indianapolis; Charleston Animal Society; Humane Society of the Pikes Peak Region; Humane Society of Southwest Missouri; Oregon Humane Society; Quincy Humane Society; and the San Diego Humane Society provided ASPCA volunteers to help with the removal and care of the animals.

The ASPCA has assisted the gaming commission with multiple animal-fighting investigations in recent years.

Conducting an animal fight and the possession of animals for fighting are level 6 felonies in Indiana, each punishable by six months in county jail to 2.5 years in state prison, and a potential maximum fine of $10,000.



Madison man charged in break-in

Courier staff report

Madison Police Officers Wednesday arrested Roger D. Griffin, 46, of Madison, on charges of residential entry and resisting law enforcement following an incident at Madtown Liquors on the corner of East Second and Mulberry streets.

The initial call to law enforcement told officers there was a man trying to break into a residence in the 200 block of East Second Street before running into the liquor store.

The store's manager led officers to the back of the stock room where he saw the man later identified as Griffin flee on foot.

The manager assisted officers in the search of the area, including the second floor of the store, where they found Griffin.

A news release from MPD said Griffin "failed to cooperate while being placed into handcuffs," including ignoring verbal directions and physical attempts to struggle away from officers.

Griffin told officers that he did not remember what he had broken into and that he "had been using methamphetamine."

Griffin was taken to the Jefferson County Jail.

Cubs O'Banion runs to 400M win at regional

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

O'Banion

Madison's Daunte O'Banion and a school-record 48.44 in the 400-meter dash to win regional and Southwestern's Mitchell Cline ran a 49.80 that was fourth at regional but top 16 in the state as both earned trips to the state finals

Cline

Madison's Daunte O'Banion sprinted into the state finals — and did so in record fashion — with a win in the 400-meter dash in the IHSAA Boys Track & Field Regional at Bloomington North on Thursday.

O'Banion, a senior who has signed with Indiana Tech, blistered the track with a winning time of 48.44, which not only broke his own school record in the event, but was also the fourth-fastest speed in the state. He is the first regional champion from Madison since Jordan Partee won the long jump in 2013.

TRACK & FIELD REGIONALS

Southwestern's Mitchell Cline finished fourth in the same event behind three athletes who all eclipsed the state standard of 49.40. Cline, a junior, recorded a time of 49.80 while Johnathan McGlothlin of Edgewood was second at 48.93 and Daxton Schmidt of Bloomington South was third at 49.38 as both earned berths to the state finals.

Cline's time was good enough to win three of the eight regionals across the state — and good enough to earn him a trip to the state finals — for the second-straight year.

In fact, one of those regional winners was a runner who Cline defeated head-to-head earlier this month at the Ohio River Valley Conference championships at Switzerland County when Cline's 49.18 broke a 48-year-old conference record.

Milan's Matthew Riehle's ran second in the ORVC meet with a 49.30 — 0.12 behind Cline — but he won the Warren Central Regional on Thursday with a 49.52.

The Valparaiso Regional had yet to report as of deadline, but Cline posted the fastest time of any fourth-place qualifier at the other six regionals so there would have to be at least three runners faster than Cline at the Valparaiso Regional, who are not in the top three there, to keep the Rebel junior from securing a spot in the state finals.

Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum reported early Friday morning that Cline had indeed made the cut, noting that the junior's time was 16th fastest in the state on Thursday.

In addition to his finish in the 400 dash, Cline was also eighth in the 200 dash in 23.93 after placing fourth in the preliminary round. Cline also qualified for the regional in both the 100 dash and the long jump, but scratched out of both events in order to concentrate on the 400.

"We used the 200 as more of a warm up/distraction. He did have an outside chance in it but his focus was getting out in the 400 again," Nussbaum said of Cline. "I think tonight he got away from his race and was too worried about what everyone else was doing. We are going to focus on that this week and I think he will knock out his best time at state.

"Making it to state two years in a row is really hard to do but Mitchell is relentless in his training and deserves every accolade that comes his way," Dussbaum said.

Cline's teammate Caleb Ream had a strong showing in the 300 hurdles, placing fifth in 41.65 while Madison's Blair Holt was sixth in the 800 run in a personal-best 1:59.70.

Holt, O'Banion, Nick Center and Jack Kelsey teamed up to place fifth in the 1600 relay in a season-best 3:29.75 while the Rebel quartet of Brandon Smith, Adam Anderson, Ream and Jacob Grider were eighth in the same event in 3:35.19.

Elliott shuts down Milan 3-0 in semifinals

VERSAILLES — Southwestern starter Bailey Elliott allowed the first two batters to reach but then settled into a groove to out-duel Milan's Joel Norman and lead the Rebels to a 3-0 win in the semifinals of the Class 2A Baseball Sectional at South Ripley on Thursday.

Elliott gave up a single to the Indians' Grayden Taylor and hit Dakota Sams to give Milan a golden opportunity to score first in the matchup of two Ohio River Valley Conference teams.

But Elliott wiggled free of the jam with two pop-ups and a strikeout and didn't face another threat until the sixth inning as he found his rhythm and began mowing down Indian batters.

It was exactly the kind of performance the Rebels needed in the win or go home environment of the postseason.

"I knew that I had to be efficient and come out and throw strikes because our defense is really good and if they put balls in play, I know my defense is going to back me up," Elliott said. "That's how I go up there every day. I don't worry about how many strikeouts I have, I just want to let them put the ball in play and let the defense do the work."

Southwestern's defense made every play asked of it, but the senior Elliott also struck out his fair share of batters, collecting 10 punchouts over the seven innings without walking a batter and allowing just four hits. That included a stretch of six strikeouts over eight batters from the end of the first through the third inning.

"He's a rhythm guy. I think once he sees a little bit of success early, he builds and builds and he actually learns something every time a guy comes up there. You can see him making adjustments through the whole game," Southwestern coach Derik Hutton said. "The way he works with our pitching coach, they have a pretty unique bond. They kind of feed off each other."

Elliott needed to be on top of his game because Norman was more than willing to match the Rebel pitch-for-pitch.

While not striking out batters at the rate of his counterpart, Norman was even more effective than Elliott early. He sat down the first eight Rebels before allowing a hit to Dylan West and walking Tyler Kramer in the third but getting out of the inning.

After Norman sat the Rebels down in order in the fourth, Southwestern finally broke through in the fifth for what proved to be the winning run.

Foster Mefford opened the inning by reaching on an infield single and an error by Norman allowed Jackson Stockdale to reach and sent Mefford to third. Brady McLain then grounded out to second base to score Mefford and give the Rebels a 1-0 lead.

It was only one run, but it was more than enough for Elliott.

"It was huge. I always feel like when I'm pitching and it's 0-0, I feel like once we get one run, we'll be set," Elliott said. "As a pitcher, I feel like now I've got the insurance run, I can do my job and just pitch."

Elliott sat the Indians (11-6) down in order in the fifth then ran into his only true jam in the sixth. Back-to-back infield singles by Dakota Sams and Caiden Yorn put two runners on with one out. But Elliott induced groundballs from both Joel Norman and Adam Norman to escape without any damage.

Southwestern rewarded their pitcher's effort with two crucial insurance runs in the seventh inning.

Mitchell Adcock opened the inning with a single and Mefford followed with a one-out single to put runners on the corners. McLain then dropped a two-out single into right field to score courtesy runner Trevor Smith and West followed with an infield single to score a run to push the lead to 3-0.

"That rally came from a kid in Brady McLain who has gotten spot starts this year and he has done that numerous times when he's gotten the opportunity," Hutton said. "No one's afraid of going up there in that situation and we're all benefiting from it. We're 17-3 over our last 20 games and a lot of it is because we're bringing guys off the bench that are contributing right away. It says a lot about those kids and it says a lot about the bottom of the lineup."

All that was left was for Elliott to close out the win. He got the first two batters easily in the bottom of the seventh but allowed the third to reach when his throw to first was off-line, leading to a nasty collision at first base between the Rebels' Stockdale and Milan's Tray Robbins. Stockdale eventually left the game with a broken tooth while Robbins stayed in to run the bases.

Elliott shrugged off that situation by striking out the final batter to end the game.

Southwestern managed just six hits off of Norman with five coming from guys hitting sixth or lower in the lineup. West, the No. 9 hitter, went 2-for-3 with an RBI while Mefford, batting sixth, was 2-for-3 with two runs scored. McLain, the No. 8 hitter, had a hit and two RBIs and Adcock, the cleanup hitter, went 1-for-3.

Norman finished with just two strikeouts and one walk while allowing three runs on six hits in seven innings. Taylor had two of the Indians' four hits.

Southwestern (18-9) will face Austin (15-13) in the championship game on Monday at 11 a.m. in Versailles. The Eagles, who have won six of the last eight sectional titles, edged South Ripley 1-0 in the other semifinal on Thursday.

The Rebels will be aiming for their first sectional title since 1999 and while Hutton has tried to keep his players focused on one game at a time, he admitted that it has been tough the closer the team has gotten to breaking the streak.

"When you're dealing with kids, they're always looking at the big picture and I'd be lying if I said that our coaching staff hasn't been too," Hutton said. "We know what we're getting. We've seen these guys play a couple of times and hopefully no surprises."

Formula One eyes may have opened after Alonso's Indy 500 flop

By DAVE SKRETTA
AP Sports Writer

"Fernando (Alonso) is a world champion. You expect him to do a good job. But at Indianapolis, to find speed, it's experience, kind of the tricks of the trade that money can't buy, and I think that gets lost on a lot of people, and I think that was on full display this past week."

Current IndyCar and former F1 driver Alexander Rossi

INDIANAPOLIS — Alexander Rossi had no idea what he was getting into when he moved from Formula One to IndyCar.

But as Rossi soon found out — and as two-time world champion Fernando Alonso and his McLaren team learned in failing to qualify for the Indianapolis 500 last weekend — getting around Indianapolis Motor Speedway at speeds eclipsing 230 mph is a lot tougher than it looks.

"I didn't understand what oval racing was. I didn't understand what IndyCar racing was, because there is no exposure to it in Europe," said Rossi, an American who moved to Europe as a teenager and made his F1 dreams come true with seven starts during the 2014 and '15 seasons.

"So when guys haven't been a part of it," Rossi said, "they don't understand how difficult it is, how unique it is to everything they've done. On TV, let's be honest, it doesn't look that challenging, so being a European driver, in your mind you're at the pinnacle of the sport. You think, 'Of course I can go over there and do that and it wouldn't be a problem.'"

That inherent arrogance was underscored two years ago, when Alonso showed up at the Indy 500 for the first time. He ran near the front all race, only for his Honda engine to let him down.

Naturally, many F1 drivers were quick to pounce on their rival open-wheel series, claiming it must not be too difficult to win in IndyCar if Alonso could be competitive right out of the gate.

"I looked at the times and, frankly, for his first-ever qualifying for Fernando to be fifth — what does that say about Indy?" five-time F1 champion Lewis Hamilton mused to L'Equipe shortly afterward.

"A great driver," he said, "if he cannot win in Formula 1, will look for other races to win."

In other words, Hamilton was calling IndyCar second-rate.

That's part of why so many eyebrows jumped at McLaren's spectacular disappointment.

"Fernando may have done well in 2017, so there may have been a feeling like all he has to do is show up and take it over," said Mark Miles, the chairman of Hulman & Co., which owns Indianapolis Motor Speedway. "I think this causes that sense of, 'Hey, this is harder than we thought.'"

The team that bumped the well-funded, England-based team with the rich racing heritage from this year's field? None other than Juncos Racing, the tiny team founded by Argentina-born Ricardo Juncos and to this day run on such a shoestring budget that it was still signing up sponsors on Wednesday .

The moment Kyle Kaiser put their car in the field last Sunday was the moment McLaren's world collapsed, leading to the firing of Bob Fernley, who headed its IndyCar operation.

"We got it wrong," the team's boss, Zak Brown, said Thursday ahead of this weekend's Monaco Grand Prix, the showcase race on the

Defending champ Carroll dethroned by LadyCats 4-1

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Henry County used two hits and two walks to break open a close game and pick up a 4-1 win over Carroll County in the 31st District Softball Championship game at Owen County on Wednesday.

With Henry's Grace Adams and Carroll's Andrea Searcy locked in a pitchers' duel, runs were going to be at a premium and the game was destined to come down to the final at-bat.

But the LadyCats ended most of that drama with a three-run fifth inning that not only allowed them to win their fifth district title in the past six years, but avenge last year's championship game loss to Carroll.

"Offensively, we just didn't have good at-bats. We'd get runners in scoring position and we couldn't get them in," Carroll coach Chelsie Zink said. "We knew that if we made mistakes, they would take advantage of it and that's exactly what they did."

Both Adams and Searcy struck out 12 batters in the game, but it was Henry's ability to make the most of its few chances that was the difference in the game.

The LadyCats (24-4) picked up three of their five hits in the game in the first inning, getting a lead-off bunt single by Gracie Golden, an infield RBI single from Lizzy Young and a single by Sydney Raisor to score a run and take a 1-0 lead.

Searcy wiggled out of a jam of her own making in the second inning when she walked a pair of batters then walked the leadoff batter in the third before settling down. She struck out four-straight batters at one point and allowed Henry just one baserunner over the next three innings to keep her team in the game.

But Adams was more than up to the task. After giving up a booming double to Mallory Besselman in the first, the freshman pitcher struck out six-straight batters and allowed just three baserunners until the seventh, one on a double by Bailey Mefford in the third and the other a walk to Bailey Stewart in the fifth.

It was still a 1-0 game until the fifth when Henry used some timely hitting to finally give itself some breathing room.

Golden started the rally by drawing a one-out walk and after a sacrifice by Haley Peyton, Zink opted to intentionally walk the hot-hitting Young, who came into the game batting nearly .600 on the season.

The move backfired when Savannah Russell banged an RBI single to score Golden and Raisor followed with a two-run double to open up the 4-0 lead.

"I think nerves played a little into it, but they knew coming into it what to expect. Henry had beaten us 4-1 earlier in the season," Zink said. "We just didn't make the adjustments. They were the better team tonight."

Down to its last at-bat, Carroll County (20-5) made one final push to tie the game and keep their championship hopes alive.

Searcy reached on an error to open the seventh and Hailey Austin followed by drawing a rare walk from Adams. After a strikeout, Stewart reached on an another error that scored Searcy with the Panthers' first run and brought the tying run to the plate with just one out.

But Adams stopped the rally cold. She struck out Whitney Cummings for the second out, then popped up Jordan Ray to clinch the title.

In the end, Searcy walked five batters and allowed four earned runs on five hits to go along with her 12 strikeouts. Adams was even better, giving up one unearned run on two hits with just two walks. Both pitchers were named to the all-tournament team.

Besselman and catcher Allie Beach were also named to the all-tournament team from Carroll County while Raisor, who went 2-for-3 with a double and two RBIs, Peyton and Golden were named to the all-tournament team from Henry County.

Also earning all-tournament honors were Kaytlyn Klayer from Gallatin County, Alexis Shields and Clarice Wilkerson from Eminence, and Katelyn Parker and Baleigh Young from Owen County.

Both teams will advance to the Eighth Region Tournament, which will be played at Simon Kenton High School in Independence and will begin on today.

F1 calendar. "There are little stories behind each of those individual issues and how they transpired, but you know, we didn't execute and therefore we didn't qualify for the Indy 500."

In doing so, they showed just how difficult it is to win the "Greatest Spectacle in Racing," and perhaps earned IndyCar drivers a certain measure of respect from their F1 counterparts.

"You've got to be a good driver, but setup and all those things at those margins is so important," said F1 driver Daniel Ricciardo, who has never driven an Indy car or raced on an oval. "I don't know the ins and outs, but everything needs to work right and that's the thing with race cars. It's a love-hate relationship. Obviously, this year for (Alonso) was more of a hate one.

"It's sad to see," Ricciardo added. "Obviously as part of the F1 family, we want him to do well."

One of the reasons the Indy 500 is so difficult is it tests the machines — and how they are tuned — just as much as the drivers. Manufacturers such as Mercedes and Ferrari can pump $300 million into their teams and essentially buy the crucial tenths of a second they need to win races, but IndyCar teams work with a relatively stock setup that puts the onus on crew and driver.

"A big team like McLaren, and you see a small team like Juncos, it just shows this competition, it's not easy no matter who you are," three-time Indy 500 winner Helio Castroneves said. "It is one of the toughest places on Earth to get in, and you've seen big teams like Penske have failed."

Rossi has so far bucked the trend, winning the 100th running of the Indy 500 in his 2016 debut. He was second the following year and fourth last year, each time benefiting from the experience, equipment and resources that his Andretti Autosport team has poured into its efforts over the years.

"Fernando is a world champion. You expect him to do a good job," Rossi said. "But at Indianapolis, to find speed, it's experience, kind of the tricks of the trade that money can't buy, and I think that gets lost on a lot of people, and I think that was on full display this past week."

Juwan Howard to coach Michigan

By LARRY LAGE
AP Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Juwan Howard is coming back to Michigan.

The former member of the Fab Five agreed to a five-year deal, which will pay him $2 million in his first year, on Wednesday to lead the Wolverines.

"As a 'Michigan Man' I know the place our program has in college basketball and I embrace the chance to build onto that history and lead us to championships both in the Big Ten and national level," Howard said. "We will continue to develop young men on the court, in the classroom and in the community that our fan base will continue to be proud of."

Michigan athletic director Warde Manuel, in his first major move in three years in charge of the department, is giving the Miami Heat assistant coach his first shot at being a head coach other than during the NBA's summer league.

"We have found someone with high integrity, great character and a coach who has unbelievable knowledge of the game of basketball," Manuel said. "Juwan has proven himself to be a tremendous leader, a wonderful communicator and a developer of talent. We couldn't have asked for a better role model for the young men in our program. We are excited to welcome back a member of the family to Ann Arbor."

He replaces John Beilein, who left to coach the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Howard helped Michigan reach the national championship game twice, playing alongside Chris Webber, Jalen Rose, Jimmy King and Ray Jackson. The school later removed the Fab Five's Final Four banners from Crisler Arena as part of self-imposed sanctions that stemmed from one of the NCAA's largest financial scandals.

A federal investigation revealed now-deceased booster Ed Martin gave Webber and three non-Fab Five players more than $600,000. The NCAA forced the school to dissociate from the former players involved until 2013. The saga stained the university and basketball program, leading to many years of struggles.

"Juwan wasn't a part of that," Jackson told AP in a telephone interview. "He was never involved. And despite being part of the Fab Five, which is tied to Ed Martin, Juwan embodies the professionalism and positivity that Michigan represents across the world."

Beilein became the leader Michigan needed, running the program without a hint of controversy and bringing the school back to the national title game in 2013 and 2018. The Wolverines also won two Big Ten season championships — accomplishments the Fab Five never achieved — along with a pair of conference tournament titles while becoming the school's all-time winningest coach.

Although Howard doesn't have ties to Michigan's recent history with Beilein, his connection to the school is significant. Howard's hiring may bring a wave of excitement with endorsements from former teammates such as Webber and Rose along with LeBron James and Dwyane Wade. His coaching experience in the NBA also makes him an attractive coach for top prospects.

Howard had been a candidate to be a head coach in the NBA, including at Cleveland coincidently.

The 46-year-old Howard, who is from Chicago, played at Michigan for three seasons before Washington drafted him No. 5 overall in 1994. The two-time NBA champion with the Heat and one-time All-Star averaged 13.4 points, 6.1 rebounds and 2.2 assists during his career that ended after the 2012-13 season.

Howard went into coaching after retiring as a player, starting as an assistant coach focused on player development with the Heat being promoted to an assistant coach with one of the franchises he played for during his 19-year career.

The Heat had long been bracing for Howard to move up in the coaching ranks. They knew Howard's longtime goal has been an NBA job, but understood that if Michigan ever called, he would have to take a long look at the opportunity.

"I'm happy for Juwan, Jenine and his family, and feel he is deserving of this opportunity to coach at the University of Michigan," Heat president Pat Riley said. "He is going back to a school and a conference in which he is revered. I think it is a great step forward for him and the university, and I wish him nothing but the best, because that's what he's given us."

Sweet start turns sour for Switz. in sectional loss to Austin

By MARK CAMPBELL

Switzerland County's Cade Rider slides home (above) on a wild pitch for one of the Pacers' two first inning runs and pitcher Zach Weaver lets out a deep sigh after walking the bases loaded in the bottom of the first. The Pacers went on to lose 8-2 to Austin in the opening game of the Class 2A South Ripley baseball sectional. Rider, a senior, give junior teammate Damian Breeck a hug after the loss (left). Staff photos by Mark Campbell)

VERSAILLES — There are recipes for wins and recipes for losses and Switzerland County baseball cooked up a little of the former and a little too much of the latter in Wednesday's 8-2 Sectional 45 loss to Austin at South Ripley High School.

Switzerland's first course was a recipe for a win when the Pacers opened the top of the first inning by scoring two runs on a one-out double by Damian Breeck, an error on a ball hit by senior Cade Rider, another error on a grounder by Patrick Stow and a hit batter.

But what was a sweet start to the postseason soon turned sour in the bottom of the inning when Swiss starter Zach Weaver immediately began to struggle. The junior left-hander walked the leadoff batter but erased him on a fielder's choice but then gave up a single up the middle to go with a Pacers error to load the bases.

A 4-0 walk forced in the Eagles' first run before a pop-up to third picked up the second out. Weaver never was able to get the third out, instead walking in the second run on a 3-1 pitch and hitting a batter to force in another. What had been a 2-0 Switzerland lead was now a 3-2 deficit.

Weaver, who never looked comfortable on the mound in a game that was delayed at the start by a 40-minute pop-up shower, was done on the mound. Pacers coach Chad Combs went to his bullpen and freshman Drew Chatham pitched the rest of the game.

Austin added another run in the third on a leadoff single by Conner Capps followed by a bunt single and a grounder to third that both resulted in Switzerland throwing errors. The Eagles then pushed the game out of reach with a four-run fifth inning that was once again fueled by three walks and three errors.

Switzerland County had opportunities against Austin senior starter Peyton Hollan but each time the Eagles' defense came to the rescue.

The Pacers loaded the bases twice in the third inning but a pickoff at second and a nice save on a ground ball up the middle left three stranded. A leadoff walk in the sixth, just Hollan's third of the game, was quickly erased by a 1-6-3 double play and Hollan slammed the door shut on his own in the seventh by fanning the final two Pacers at the top of the Switzerland order for strikeouts number eight and nine to end the game.

The loss closes out a 3-20 season for the Pacers, the defending sectional champions who lose just one senior in third baseman Rider. Combs returns six juniors, four sophomores and five freshman to make another run at a sectional title next season and he spent a long time talking to that group after Wednesday's loss.

Austin, which won sectionals in 2016 and 2017, defeated tourney host South Ripley 1-0on Thursday in Versailles.

The Eagles (15-13) will now play Southwestern (18-9) in the sectional championship game at 11 a.m. on Monday in Versailles.

Hanover PV Trimpe 16th at NCAA championships

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Hanover College's Erin Trimpe closed out her stellar pole vaulting career at the NCAA Division III Outdoor Track & Field National Championships in Geneva, Ohio on Wednesday.

Trimpe, a senior from New Palestine, began the day by clearing the opening height of 3.50 meters in her second attempt. She then successfully cleared 3.65 meters on her second attempt before the senior just missed on all three tries at 3.75 meters, which is just 0.2 meters shy of her 3.77-meter school-record in the event.

Trimpe tied for 16th at the national championships on height but due to tiebreakers with previous jumps the senior settled for 20th place.

With her season complete, Trimpe cleared 3.50 meters in eight of her 10 outings this spring and was one of five Hanover athletes to receive USTFCCCA all-region accolades earlier in the week. In 2018, Trimpe made history by placing 10th in the pole vault, which was the best field performance in program history at the NCAA-hosted meet.

Erin Browning, a sophomore from Greensburg, will bring the 2019 track & field season to a close for Hanover when she competes in the hammer throw today.

Madison's Bryce Foy had qualified for the regional in the 100 dash but tweaked his hamstring in practice on Monday and was unable to run.

"I felt bad for Bryce. He had a heck of a year and they worked and worked on that hamstring. He tried to go and had one run-out, but just couldn't do it," Madison coach Scott Holcroft said. "I'm really proud of all of the kids. It has been one heck of a run all season and we still have one week left."

Madison placed 11th overall as a team with 17 points while Southwestern tied for 14th with 11 points. Bloomington North won the regional crown with 98 points, just 2.5 points ahead of crosstown rival Bloomington South which had 95.5.

The IHSAA State Track & Field Finals will be held at Indiana University in Bloomington on Friday, May 31. The 400-meter dash is expected to be run about 7 p.m.

Hilltoppers' Hill exits IHSAA tennis tourney

COURIER STAFF REPORT

Shawe tennis player Abigail Hill saw her season end with a loss in the second round of the IHSAA Individual Sectional at Bloomington South on Wednesday.

Abigail Hill

Hill, playing at No. 1 singles, fell 6-3, 6-1 to Austin's Jalen Coomer, a day after picking up a win in her opener.

"This was a tough loss tonight as she played a consistent opponent who plays with pretty constant slice to her shots. It is hard to adjust to these type of groundstrokes," Shawe coach Natalie Hill said. "This was a learning experience and you can only grow from this; although it is not fun to lose in this way. However, Abigail has had a pretty good season overall and was 11-6 for the year. We are very proud of her and feel that she has grown in her game and in her confidence level. She will continue to practice in the off season to improve her game."

Hanover College unveils mural

'All the labor that goes into making Hanover'

Laman Istrabad, forefront, and Emma Shockley, Michaela Diem, Ryan Ruder, Rachel Pelfrey and Sway Batista paint in the sections of the mural for which they were responsible (above). Teacher Tiffany Black stands amid them while Alondra Corral, background, steps back to look at the mural. She is a 2018 honors graduate of Madison Consolidated High School. Boxes and buckets of supplies were nearby (below) for the Hanover College students while they painted. Hands are prominent in the mural; Blessings Culver, in red shirt, was the official blender of the colors in all the hands.

Teacher Tiffany Black, forefront, watches her students work on their mural in time for the unveiling Friday. When she was a student at Hanover, she painted a very large mural on the east wall of Shipley's Tavern in the 300 block of West Street.

Eleven Hanover College art students, along with people from the community, painted a mural on the side of the college's physical plant that honors labor at the college and in the surrounding area –"all the labor that goes into making Hanover….the stuff that makes everything go 'round," said Connor Trimborn, one of the students. The mural, which can be seen from State Road 56, was designed by Tiffany Black, a 2008 Hanover graduate who is a freelance set designer and builder in New York. She came back to Hanover to teach large-scale painting during the college's May Term, a month-long session in which students take a single, intensive class. About 60 other people helped paint during three community painting events. Nine of the students are freshmen, one is a sophomore and one is a junior. The unveiling was scheduled Friday afternoon, the last day of classes. (Courier staff photos by Peggy Vlerebome)

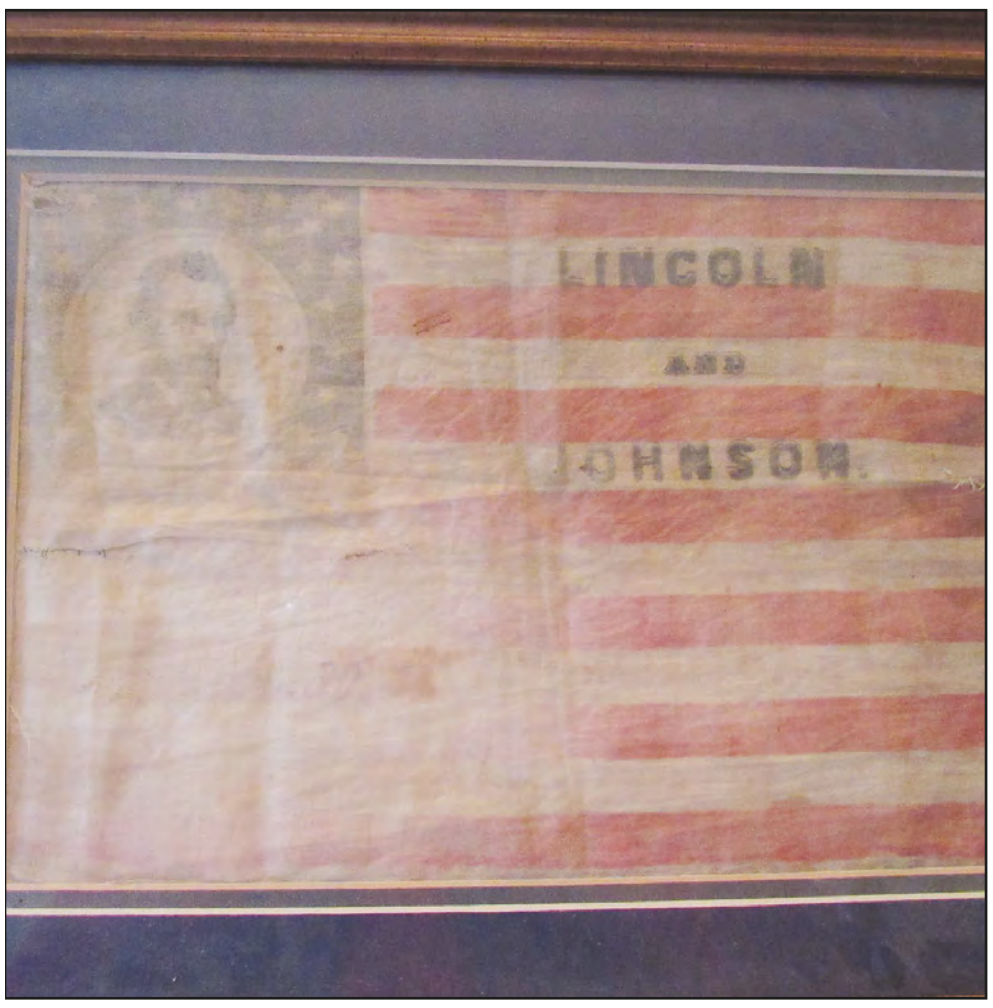
Lincoln-Johnson campaign flag a rare collectors' find



Courier staff report

Sara J. Minor has been an auctioneer in Madison for many years, but she recently found herself in a one-of-a-kind moment that gives pause even to folks accustomed to looking at items that are historical treasures.

It was a campaign flag made for the 1864 presidential election campaign of Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson.

The item was among several that Minor was handling for Mary Wells Eckert of Madison. Eckert had attached the note below to the framed flag.

"I have long been fascinated by the history of Abraham Lincoln as Indiana was his boyhood home and he freed the slaves during the Civil War," Eckert explained. "I found this campaign flag when I was in the fourth grade in my family home. At the time, I had been assigned to give a report about Abraham Lincoln and was thrilled to discover the campaign flag folded in an old dictionary."

Eckert, who lived in her great-grandparents' home as a child, said she has read in articles online from the Logansport, Indiana, newspaper that her great-grandmother had meetings in her house for the Lincoln Club and for The Grand Army of the Republic. She said she let the flag remain in the book for about 15 years and then decided to frame it.

"My great-grandfather's name was Lincoln Gipe and he was married to Flora Bell Custer Gipe. I believe they were originally from Cambridge City, Indiana. Flora Bell was the daughter of Mercy Anna Merrick. Mercy Anna Merrick married John L. Custer, who was a drummer in the Civil War. Mercy Anna Merrick was originally from Buck's County, Pennsylvania and moved to Cambridge City, Indiana.

"I believe she and her husband, John, were the original owners of the Lincoln/Johnson campaign flag because of their ages, which would have been about 20 years old during the Civil War.

"The date on the campaign flag is very faded, but I think the date is September 30, 1864. That is Lincoln's second run for President. His first run was with Hamlin as his vice president."

Minor said she knew she was looking at a rare piece.

"There are a few auction houses in large cities that schedule auctions with Historic American and Native American items, many from large collections or museums. It's very rare for a single item to show up in someone's personal possessions," she explained.

Minor said she immediately contacted the American History expert at Cowan's (in Cincinnati) to ask her idea of the flag's value and rarity in the condition it was.

The flag was advertised locally in The Madison Courier, and given special attention on AuctionZip.com, which resulted in many inquiries from several states, Minor said.

There were local bidders and three bidders on phones. Two of the bidders were from North Carolina —Wilmington and Raleigh — and one bidder was from Fishers, Indiana. The winning bid of $3,200 was from Wilmington.

"To sell just a rare piece of America's history will always be a moment that I will treasure," Minor said.

Sickened by sister's sexual assault

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: Over the summer, my sister was raped. She chose not to report it. She was at a house party when it happened. She doesn't know who did it. She confided in me the morning after, and I urged her to report so that the person who did it could be prosecuted and, hopefully, kept from harming more people. But I also saw that it was ultimately her decision and she needed to do what was best for her psyche. I'm still in a very dark place about all this, but I can't talk to her about it.

First of all, I'm sure talking about it would trigger her, make her more anxious than she already is. Secondly, if I tell her I'm really distressed over this, she'll feel like a burden, like she shouldn't have confided in me.

What should I do? I want to do what's best for my sister, and I also need to restore my sanity. I feel sick just thinking about all this. — Saddened Sister

Dear Saddened Sister: My heart goes out to your sister. I am so sorry that she had to endure trauma. Your feelings of sickness are completely valid. The repercussions from rape can literally be sickening to all those affected by it.

The first step is to do exactly what you did: Listen without offering any judgment. Simply listening and validating whatever she tells you are the right steps. If she decides later to report the incident, you can offer to take her to the police station. While she is processing her emotions, talking through her things with trained professions could also help. The National Sexual Assault Hotline is 800-656-HOPE (4673).

You sound like a very sensitive sister, and one thing I would like to point out to other readers is that if your friend or family member is the victim of sexual assault, avoid any possible victim blaming questions. For example, "What were you wearing?"

I am so glad that you took the time to write, not only because you bring up an important issue but also because it is important that you take care of yourself. Helping your sister can leave you feeling depleted and exhausted.

Dear Annie: I am a member of an artists' coop gallery. We take turns gallery-sitting and generally get together for a monthly meeting.

One difficult topic I don't know how to address is that one or some of the men pee on the bathroom floor.

Personally, I don't clean up after men, but this situation bothers me. I would like to address it but do not know how. I welcome your thoughts. — Not a Handmaid

Dear Not a Handmaid: The way to address this situation is head on.

Hold a meeting with all members of your coop and explain the problem. This will give everyone the chance to know about the problem, and to air out any other cleanliness concerns. Tell the men that if they miss the bowl and some of their spray winds up on the bathroom floor, they need to clean up after themselves. Violation of this will result in being asked to leave the coop. Hygiene is important in any work place.

Perhaps the men are not aware that they are doing it. So now that you have made them aware, there should be no more sticky floors. Keep some baking soda and vinegar in the bathroom. If there are reoffenders, they should make a paste with these ingredients to clean up their mess.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! BRIDGE

TWO CHANCES ARE BETTER THAN ONE

Marley Dias, a 14-year-old activist and feminist, said, "Innovation comes from: one, acknowledging yourself; two, studying and understanding the problem; and three, finding a solution."

Bridge deals require studying them, understanding the problem and finding a solution.

In today's deal, for example, how should South play in six spades after West leads the heart king?

When North raised to four spades, showing 18-20 support points, South knew not to use Blackwood, because he had two immediate heart losers and could not guarantee that North had a first- or second-round control in the suit. So, South made a five-club control-bid. Then, over five diamonds, his five-spade continuation made it plain that he had fast heart losers. With the heart ace, North raised to six spades.

South is faced with potential losers in each major suit. Declarer will get home if he can draw trumps without loss; or if he can discard his second heart.

If South tries to avoid a spade loser, he will cash dummy's king, then play a low spade, planning to put in his jack. If the suit is 3-2 and the finesse works, he is going to end with an overtrick.

The alternative is to cash the two top spades. Maybe the queen will drop. If not, South turns to diamonds, hoping to pitch his last heart on the fourth diamond. As you can see, that works in this layout; and usually a line that has two ways to win will be better than a plan that has only one string to its bow.

Exhibits about Ali, nature, motorcycles opening at Graceland

By ADRIAN SAINZ

MEMPHIS, Tennessee (AP) — A massive new exhibition and entertainment hall is set to open at Elvis Presley's Graceland in Tennessee with three museum-style exhibits, including one focused on the life and career of late boxing great Muhammad Ali.

Graceland officials say the 80,000-square-foot (7,432-square-meter) Graceland Exhibition Center opens Saturday to guests visiting the Presley-themed tourist attraction in Memphis. The singer, actor and pop icon lived in Memphis until his death on Aug. 16, 1977.

Presley and Ali were known to be friends. Presley once gave Ali a custom-made robe in Las Vegas in the early 1970s. A replica of that robe is part of the Ali exhibit, along with photos of the heavyweight boxing and civil rights champion and other artifacts.

Visitors will be able to hit a punching bag and learn the Ali shuffle from a video tutorial by the boxer, who died in June 2016.

Also scheduled to open Saturday is an exhibit featuring a collection of motorcycles, ranging from basic to flashy, spanning decades of design. A third exhibit, called "National Geographic Presents: Earth Explorers," allows visitors to learn about polar regions, oceans, rain forests, mountains, caves, and the African savanna.

The exhibition hall is part of a yearslong expansion at Graceland, which already features Presley's home-turned museum, a 450-room hotel and an entertainment complex that holds a concert venue, Presley-related exhibits and restaurants. The new exhibition hall also includes a food hall and a full-service bar designed to resemble the famous "Jungle Room" in Presley's former home.

Bringing the lives of Ali and Presley together at Graceland is fitting because of their impact on their professions, and on American and global culture, said Joel Weinshanker, managing partner of Graceland Holdings.

"They were pop culture revolutionaries. They were both born very poor," Weinshanker said. "They weren't emulating anyone, they weren't copying anyone. They were just getting out what was inside of them."

He said he hopes the new, $20 million hall will attract more conventions to Graceland while bringing more large traveling exhibits to the city — including those that have nothing to do with Presley.

"Space: An Out-Of-Gravity Experience," which features interactive exhibits about living and working in space, is scheduled to open Oct. 11 at the new hall.

Texas 8th-grader wins National Geographic contest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nihar Janga, an eighth-grader from Austin, Texas, with an already impressive array of awards, took home top honors Wednesday in the 31st annual National Geographic GeoBee, an elite test of geographic knowledge.

Janga triumphed during a competition at the National Geographic Society headquarters in Washington. The student from Austin's Canyon Ridge Middle School was also a co-champion of the 2016 Scripps National Spelling Bee and a top-ten finalist in the 2018 GeoBee.

The society also held the first-ever national-level competition of the GeoChallenge, a team competition that asked for innovative solutions to modern problems. This year's challenge: plastic pollution in our waterways.

A team from Flushing Christian School in Flushing, New York, won by building a model filtration device to clear plastic debris from the Hudson River.

The winning team will receive $25,000 plus support to implement their project. Janga will receive a $25,000 college scholarship, a lifetime membership in the National Geographic Society and an expedition to the Galápagos Islands aboard the National Geographic Endeavour ll.

Alabama Public Television won't run 'Arthur' gay wedding

BIRMINGHAM, Alabama (AP) — Alabama Public Television has chosen not to air an episode of the PBS children's show "Arthur" because it included a same-sex wedding.

The episode "Mr. Ratburn and the Special Someone" aired nationally on May 13, showing Arthur attending the wedding of his teacher and partner.

APT showed a re-run instead.

AL.com reports that APT director of programming Mike Mckenzie defended the decision by saying parents trust that their children can watch the station without supervision.

The station had previously pulled an episode of "Arthur" in 2005 when a character had two mothers.

Misty Souder, a substitute teacher from McCalla, Alabama, says she's disappointed. She says she's using this to teach her 9-year-old daughter about the importance of standing up for minority groups.

New Coke, from 1985, makes comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — Coca-Cola drinkers will get a chance to relive one of the company's darker chapters as New Coke makes a comeback under a partnership with the Netflix drama "Stranger Things," the companies announced Tuesday.

Season 3 of the show will take place in the summer of 1985, when Coca-Cola changed its formula for Coke. New Coke was considered one of the biggest marketing blunders of all time and the new version was dropped after 79 days, though sales of the original Coca-Cola rebounded.

"The summer of 1985 did in fact change everything for us with the introduction of New Coke, which was also arguably one of the biggest pop culture moments of that year," said Oana Vlad, director of Coca-Cola Trademark, Coca-Cola North America.

Workers had to retrieve the New Coke recipe from the safe for the "Stranger Things" partnership.

Workers also had to recreate the logo and the slightly different Coke red for the cans from more than 30 years ago.

"The partnership with Coke gives Netflix the opportunity to reach a massive audience via one of the most recognizable brands in the world in a deeply authentic way," said Netflix Head of Global Partner Marketing Barry Smyth.
